

Hi,

You've already placed your trust in us to help you achieve your retirement goals. If you were to develop a critical illness, would you have enough cash on hand to cover unexpected expenses without having to dip into your retirement savings? Now is the time to take action if you're in good health and are considering critical illness health insurance.

$33,000—That's how much cancer costs the average Canadian affected, and that amount is expected to rise within the next 10 years[1]. Critical illness insurance can help you cope with the financial consequences of a diagnosis and protect what you've spent years building.

When things are going well, that's the time to take action
